RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

1. Established and supervised clinical registry for colorectal surgery emphasizing rectal cancer, minimally invasive colorectal surgery, and inflammatory bowel surgery.
 2. Clinical research in rectal cancer response to neoadjuvant therapy.
 3. Awarded National Cancer Data Base Rectal Cancer Public Use File to evaluate outcomes based on treatment modality.
 4. Diverticulitis research utilizing Nationwide Inpatient Sample.
 5. Basic science research in colonic motility.
- Medical College of Wisconsin, Department of Surgery, Division of Colorectal Surgery (September 2008 to present).

Minimally invasive surgical approaches to colorectal neoplasms, the role of neoadjuvant therapy in expanding the feasibility of sphincter preservation for low rectal cancers. Work supervised by John Marks, MD, Section of Colon and Rectal Surgery, Mainline Health Systems (July 2005 to July 2007).

High dose botulinum toxin injection for anal fissures. Work supervised by Jeffrey Milsom, MD, Section of Colon and Rectal Surgery, New York Presbyterian Hospital-Weill Medical College of Cornell University (December 2003 to July 2004).

Isolation and characterization of colonic endothelial cells. Work supervised by Mark Welton, MD, Division of Colon and Rectal Surgery, University of California, San Francisco (July 1987 to July 1998).

Anal intraepithelial neoplasia angiogenesis as a prognostic indicator. Work supervised by Mark Welton, MD, Division of Colon and Rectal Surgery, University of California, San Francisco (July 1987 to July 1998).

Social anthropology research into the cultural determinants of Western medicine. Independent graduate field research culminating in a master's thesis "Intimacy in Medical Encounters and the Construction of Personhood." University of California, Berkeley (June 1987 to June 1990).

Messenger RNA secondary structure as a mechanism of transcription regulation. Research supervised by Philip Coffino, MD, PhD, Department of Microbiology and Immunology, University of California.
